Fast-rising American countertenor Key'mon Murrah to star in Xerxes, Handel's darkly comic masterpiece, conducted by Dame Jane Glover

"It's got love stories, and it's got great heart and wonderful comedy—what more do you want from an opera?"—Dame Jane Glover

DETROIT, February 7, 2023—The sensational American countertenor Key'mon W. Murrah sings the title role in Detroit Opera's March 4 to 12 performances of Xerxes, George Frideric Handel's tongue-in-cheek 1738 masterpiece, led by renowned conductor and scholar Dame Jane Glover. James Blaszko directs this revival of Tazewell Thompson's vivid, color-soaked production, which debuted at the Glimmerglass Festival in 2017. The opera tells the story of the ancient King Xerxes, who may be the most powerful man in Persia but can't get Romilda to marry him.

These will be Detroit Opera's first performances of Xerxes (Serse), which is best known for the aria "Ombra mai fu," commonly known as "Handel's Largo." Xerxes will be performed in Italian with English translation. The stellar cast includes soprano Lauren Snouffer as Romilda, mezzo-soprano Sun-Ly Pierce as Arsamene (Romilda's lover, brother of Xerxes), mezzo-soprano Vanessa Cariddi as Amastre (betrothed to Xerxes), soprano Elizabeth Sutphen as Atalanta (Romilda's sister), bass-baritone Nicholas Newton as Ariodate (Romilda's father), and Michael Sumuel in the comic role of Elviro. British conductor Dame Jane Glover, longtime music director of Chicago's Music of the Baroque, is one of the world's foremost interpreters of 18th-century music and is author of the critically acclaimed books Mozart's Women and Handel in London.

The role of Xerxes represents a major debut for Key'mon Murrah, a native of Louisville, Kentucky who is rapidly gaining notice in the U.S. and internationally for his stunningly wide range and vocal agility. Recent career highlights include Leonardo in San Diego Opera's world premiere of El último sueño de Frida y Diego (The Last Dream of Frida and Diego) by Gabriela Lena Frank and Nilo Cruz; Orfeo in Gluck's Orfeo and Eurydice at Seattle Opera; and the Sorceress in Purcell's Dido and Aeneas at the Bavarian State Opera. In 2021, he won first place in Houston Grand Opera's 33rd Annual Concert of Arias and was a finalist in the Operalia Competition. His 2019 performances as Asprano in Vivaldi's Montezuma at American Baroque Opera Company were "astounding—equal in both technical prowess and drama" (Theater Jones). As Bertarido in Aspen Music Festival's 2021 performance of Handel's Rodelinda, "Murrah traced a remarkably vivid dramatic arc" with "ringing high-C's that would do a dramatic soprano proud" (Aspen Times).

Xerxes promises an evening of glorious singing in an opera that includes satirical elements (like Xerxes singing an aria to a plane tree) but also offers a more serious reflection on love and the limits of power. The production features stunning sets by John Conklin, costumes by Sara Jean Tosetti, and lighting by Robert Wierzel. "The sharp abstraction of this production's design is the perfect fit for an opera that defied so many constructs of its time," says revival director James Blaszkowski. "What could have become a standard dramatization of an obsessive King and his court was transformed by Handel through the use of humor and musical brevity. There's a unique balance of beauty, brutality, and wit to Xerxes that I think this production emphasizes so well with its vivid costumes and striking stage pictures."
